CNR STRATEGIC PLANNING PROCESS
RESULTS IN
Five Institutional Goals

BY LENORE BOYTIM CARPINELLI SAS’89

Shortly after taking office, CNR President Judith Huntington announced her top ten initiatives. Among them was an institution-wide, collaborative Strategic Planning Process. The goal of the initiative was to create a vibrant and compelling vision for the future of the College, to provide the framework for the College’s goals and direction to allow it to thrive and its students to be successful, and to assist in identifying opportunities for strategic investments in academic programs, technology, facilities, and further strengthening student outcomes.

During the 18-month process, a committee representing the College’s constituencies, predominantly faculty, worked hard to determine how to honor the unique and special mission of CNR in a meaningful and contemporary way. With the input of more than 1,000 key stakeholders, the Strategic Planning Task Force synthesized all of the data gathered into a vision statement and a number of important goals.

In July 2013, the Board of Trustees affirmed five institutional goals of the Strategic Plan directly derived from this important work. The College is now well-positioned to begin the implementation of the strategic plan. The implementation phase, the most difficult but also most important, will span several years and will be instrumental in shaping the successful future of CNR. To lead this process, President Huntington set up cross-functional teams for each of the five goals—21st Century Academics, Strategic Enrollment Management, Optimizing Resources, One CNR, and Branding & Identity.

Each implementation team is now in the initial stages of its work. The 21st Century Academics team will be evaluating all academic programs currently offered by the College and assessing them using a common, agreed-upon set of criteria in order to prioritize where resources should be targeted. The Optimizing Resources team will be conducting a similar process for all administrative programs.

The Enrollment Management team will be identifying fundamental areas that are key to developing a high-quality enrollment management plan to optimize the growth of the College, both academically and non-academically. The One CNR team has begun compiling a list of action items and prioritizing them in three layers of time-frame—immediate, within the year, and long-term—with the goal of ensuring equality in services and resources across the Schools. And the Branding & Identity team has been working throughout the fall to formally articulate the CNR brand, which will then be integrated into all marketing collateral and recruitment activities to ensure a consistent image for the College.

We look forward to sharing the ongoing work of the Strategic Plan Implementation Teams in future issues of Quarterly.
VISION STATEMENT

The College of New Rochelle has a recognizable brand and a strong reputation known for its robust academic programs which integrate the liberal arts with effective career preparation led by an accomplished body of faculty, expert in their disciplines and committed to excellence in teaching.

Our sense of unity is experienced and expressed throughout the institution. The community feels a strong sense of pride for the College and contributes authentically to fulfilling our Mission. Collaboration across institutional boundaries is prized, and shared governance is a meaningful and valued part of our culture.

Financial strength has been achieved through steady and strategic enrollment growth and diversified revenue streams. Resources are allocated in alignment with the strategic plan. Campuses are well maintained and resourced consistent with our priorities of academic excellence and student-centeredness.

An effective infrastructure supports technological integration and innovation throughout our campuses, our classrooms, and curricula.

We have strengthened existing academic programs and created new and exciting offerings that respond to the changing needs of students and complexities of our world.

Our students are engaged and empowered.

As graduates, they place their individual talents and knowledge in service to society. They seek to make a difference in the lives of others, and are proud, engaged, and supportive of their alma mater.

We are proud of who we are and remain firmly committed to the Ursuline tradition and values which enabled us to make the courageous decisions necessary to strengthen our institution.

INSTITUTIONAL GOALS & OBJECTIVES

1. 21ST CENTURY ACADEMICS
   A. Create innovative program offerings that are grounded in the liberal arts and responsive to a changing environment.
   B. Develop programs that distinguish and strengthen academics across the institution.
   C. Provide innovative holistic programs to support student success.

2. STRATEGIC ENROLLMENT MANAGEMENT
   A. Achieve optimal enrollment in every program institution-wide.
   B. Increase persistence to graduation institution-wide.

3. OPTIMIZING RESOURCES
   A. Reduce tuition dependency and expand alternative revenue streams.
   B. Improve operational efficiencies through optimal use of human and capital resources.
   C. Align resources with strategic planning goals and objectives.

4. ONE CNR
   A. Encourage institution-wide faculty and staff development and programmatic collaboration.
   B. Allocate resources and support across all campuses to ensure student success.
   C. Affirm institution-wide representative shared governance.
   D. Establish community-wide technological proficiency and digital literacy.

5. BRANDING & IDENTITY
   A. Promote an effective and consistent brand identity that clarifies our image and heritage and emphasizes our academic strengths.
Study Abroad Expands World View

BY MARK RAMIREZ

Until she traveled to Spain as part of the College’s Bridging Cultures program, Luisa Garcia SAS’14 had only been to two countries—the U.S. and her native Colombia.

It’s safe to say that the Communication Arts and Political Science major caught the travel bug on that two-week trip—she has since collected a few pages’ worth of passport stamps. “It was an incredible trip,” she said. “Once I went to Spain, it wasn’t enough.”

Garcia spent the Spring 2013 semester in London, studying at Richmond University and interning for The Today Show and quickly discovered how easy it is to travel throughout Europe. She had saved to study abroad, but thanks to scholarships and grants, that money instead went to last-minute deals to visit Scotland, Ireland, France, Greece, and Croatia.

And she did more than merely join the crowds at tourist spots. “I tried to immerse myself as much as possible,” Garcia said, “instead of, oh, let’s just take photos.” When she and a friend were in Dublin close to St. Patrick’s Day, they headed to the bus station and asked for the cheapest ticket to another town, in search of the countryside. They found themselves in the town of Kilkenny, meeting plenty of locals and bedding down in a pub that had a couple of rooms.

That’s exactly the mindset that Dr. Andre Beauzethier wants students to take away from the program, which he had overseen for 20 years before retiring this year. Beauzethier, who was also an associate professor of French, remains as an advisor.

When students return from a trip abroad—whether it’s a week or a semester—they say they are different,” Beauzethier said. “They say that they are changed. They feel it. And most want to go back a second or third time.”

The experience isn’t always easy, Beauzethier said. Many students have limited experience with air travel, much less going overseas. “Students are nervous, but they want to go. Sometimes their families are even more nervous than they are.” There are the usual hurdles of language, etiquette, and diet. They might expect milk with their breakfast, or be surprised when few people speak English, Beauzethier said.

But ultimately, students return more open-minded, less afraid to meet people who have different ideas, and more willing to explore the unknown. “This is why we started this,” Beauzethier said. The Study Abroad programs at CNR award three to 15 credits and can last for a semester or two, a month over the summer, or for one or two weeks, which is probably the most popular program.

These Bridging Cultures courses are made up of classroom sessions during the semester followed by a trip over break to a selected country, and they have recently been opened to students in the School of Nursing, the School of New Resources, and the Graduate School. The courses can be taken as electives, but faculty make every effort to tie them to students’ majors.

This summer, the first SNR students took part in the Bridging Cultures program—one group went to Ghana for ten days, while the other spent 14 days in Paris. Graduate School students are planning a ten-day trip to South Africa over winter break.

During her trip to Ghana, SNR student Raynell Bridgen found trips to the Cape Coast Slave Castle (Dungeons) and Dr. Bolling’s Nursery School extremely rewarding. “Two powerful experiences—both equally moving,” she said. Of visiting the W.E.B. DuBois Pan African Cultural Center and Mausoleum, she said, “It was overwhelming to see all of the books he read and see how passionate he was about education.”

Jessica Chavez SN’14 took advantage of the program’s expansion, as one of a dozen students who traveled to Madrid, Barcelona, and Segovia for ten days this past spring break. During the semester, the group learned about their destination—culture, food, history, and social issues—with each student assigned to serve as a kind of tour guide for particular locations. She had concerns about saving money and was surprised that servers at cafes and restaurants didn’t expect to receive tips. But the native of Peru did have the advantage of being able to speak Spanish.

Chavez said the experience has made her feel more confident about traveling, and she may make a point of visiting other countries instead of just visiting her home country. “I would definitely go back to Spain,” she said. Also on her list are Mexico, Portugal, and France.

But the trip also gave Chavez insight related to her future profession. Her report after the trip focused on how the diversity of culture in Spain affects its universal health care system, which provides benefits even to non-citizens. She researched how providers deal with different religions and languages at their hospitals.

Beauzethier said there are plans to formalize the programs for nursing students. “We may reserve four or five families in France with medical backgrounds for students to stay with,” he said.

Other specialized trips are in the works. Beauzethier said some may involve performing community work with the Ursulines in Tours, France. Another plan is to send science students to Costa Rica to study the environment. A trip not led by a language or history professor would be a first for CNR, he said.

By working with consortiums and other schools, CNR has been able to send students to every continent (save Antarctica, of course).

For many students, studying overseas simply wouldn’t be possible without financial assistance. That’s where the Russel and Deborah Taylor Foundation steps in.

“Without the Taylor scholarship, we would not have a Study Abroad program,” Beauzethier said. Since 1998, the foundation has paid half the cost of studying abroad for qualified students with a GPA of at least 3.0. More than 200 students have benefited from the scholarship, including Chavez and Garcia.

Dr. Russel Taylor joined the faculty of The College of New Rochelle in 1977 to establish its Business Department, but the inspiration for his scholarship goes back to 1936. That summer, Taylor—using some money he had made in the stock market—and two college friends took an ocean liner to London. They bought an old car there and traveled throughout the United Kingdom and the rest of Europe. Not yet 20 years old, the three slept in the car, in tents on the road, and at student hostels. They even watched the Olympics in Berlin, sitting not 40 feet away from Adolf Hitler as Jesse Owens won the 100-meter dash.

The Study Abroad program has come a long way in the past two decades. In the beginning, most students were sent to the University of Tours in France, with few exceptions. When Dr. Nereida Segura-Rico, Associate Professor of Spanish and chair of the department, joined the faculty, the program expanded to the University of Alicante in Spain.

“Bridging Cultures courses give students the opportunity to make connections between what they are studying in the classroom and their observations and experiences,” said Segura-Rico. “There are some students who are unable, or are reluctant, to study abroad on their own but participate eagerly in the trips led by faculty. A student who went to Spain for the summer program in Alicante took part in the Bridging Cultures course in Spain and in the course in Puerto Rico. She later drew on that experience for an independent study.”

“Those 11 weeks of meeting students from all over the world and going through all those countries,” Taylor said, “was probably worth at least two years of college education to me. It changed my life.”

Taylor also wants to see CNR increase its enrollment, and he believes the scholarship program can serve as a valuable recruiting tool. Many students he’s talked to consider time abroad the highlight of their undergraduate experience.

Hearing from the students he’s helped is one of the benefits Taylor takes away from the program. “It’s been a real gift to me,” he said. “It’s such fun as an educator.”

For Garcia, the experience she’s gained has proven useful as she tries to make a career of telling stories from the ground. She’s been accepted into the CBS News Associates program, a 15-month stint that will send her through the network’s various news programs. “I’m ready for them to send me anywhere.”
Living Learning Environments Build Community

BY MARK RAMIREZ

The living learning communities (LLC) at The College of New Rochelle provide organized activities, technology, and educational resources, and spaces geared toward learning. But the relationships formed with students who share similar academic goals can be just as important to their residents.

“It felt more comfortable,” said Jenean Igmat SN’17. “It’s hard enough to be in a new environment,” she added, which is why the freshman chose to join the dozen or so traditional nursing students in the same wing of Ursula Hall.

Their common experiences foster a bond, said Igmat, who is interested in geriatric care. “We know we have each other.”

The nursing LLC includes students from all levels, and Igmat often checks in with upperclassmen to see how they’re handling the classes she will soon be taking. “It helps me get a grasp of what I’m getting myself into,” she said.

The LLC is designed to encourage mentorship. It also seeks to introduce students to the culture of nursing. A faculty representative works with the RA, also a nursing student, to organize activities such as skills workshops and explorations of specialties in the field.

Students majoring in biology, chemistry, math, and environmental studies have their own living learning community. COSMOS, which stands for Creating Opportunities for Success in Math or Science, is in its second year and is designed to provide students with opportunities to explore their shared academic interests, said Dr. Faith Kostel-Hughes, Associate Professor of Biology and faculty advisor for the LLC. “Because these are also very demanding majors, we provide some additional support in their residential life to help students achieve in their academics.”

Also in Ursula Hall, the COSMOS wing houses 15 to 18 students a semester and includes common rooms designed and furnished to provide knowledge and inspire curiosity.

The study room is a sunny, quiet space with large, comfortable chairs. It will soon be home to a growing reference library, said Kostel-Hughes. The technology room is designed for group work or plain socializing, featuring a large table, a whiteboard, a desktop computer, and a printer/scanner.

There’s a bird identification chart on one wall, near the window that looks out to a feeder, and a life-size articulated skeleton can make its way between the two rooms as necessary—with assistance from the students, of course.

Downstairs in Ursula is the newly renovated lower lounge, which includes a complete kitchen, plasma TV, couches, seating that can be used for classes or meetings, and a digital display board. This space is also open to Honors LLC residents.

There’s also a COSMOS resource room, equipped with items students would usually have access to only in teaching labs—microscopes, prepared slides, anatomy and chemistry models, and graphing calculators. The room also plays host to weekly tutoring sessions. Chinwe Nzeama SAS’16 cites easy access to tutoring as a major benefit of the COSMOS wing. Informally, she also turns to fellow biology majors for academic help and emotional support. “I’ve found not just mentors, but friends who created a family-like atmosphere,” Nzeama said. Some of the activities she’s enjoyed include preparing meals from food harvested from the College’s sustainable garden, and decorating the study room.

Programming has included a coastal clean-up effort at a New Rochelle park, a study skills workshop, and a visit to the Museum of Math. “It’s hard to know the impact so far,” said Kostel-Hughes. Like Nzeama, residents appreciate the extra resources and special programs (especially the food-related ones), but it has been a struggle for some students to find time to take full advantage of the program. The College hopes to alleviate this issue by providing support from a grant from Con Edison. Money from this grant also supports many COSMOS programs. Funds provided through the generosity of Patrick and Lillian Brennan Carney also helped equip the COSMOS community.

Based on residents’ interests, plans for COSMOS include inviting more guest speakers, including alumnae, to speak to students, and organizing more field trips and community-building activities, said Kostel-Hughes. “Our hope is that, working and living together, these students will be more deeply engaged with college life, leading to greater success for them all.”

The Honors living learning community is a bit unique, in that it was created by students. Seven years ago, they created a committee which held meetings, brainstomred, and created proposals for the Honors Committee, the dean, and the vice president of student services.

Dr. Amy Bass, Professor of History and faculty advisor, said that’s her favorite thing about the Honors LLC. “I think it is an important thing for every resident to know: The space they live in was created for them by students very much like themselves.”

Shacelles Bonner SAS’15, majoring in biology and chemistry with plans to go to medical school, has lived in the Honors wing since freshman year. “It seemed like the thing to do,” she said. “I love it!”

Living in the same space definitely fosters a sense of community, Bonner said. “We’re able to talk with each other about our problems.” Some students take the same Honors classes, which means “we’re studying, but we’re doing it in a way that we’re bonding.”

The LLC also fosters relationships between students at different stages in their college careers. “It’s really nice getting to know freshmen that I wouldn’t share classes with,” said Bonner, who has transitioned into being a mentor to younger students.

Bass says this sense of community extends beyond the confines of their wing in Ursula, and that’s by design. “I am constantly working to ensure that Honors students occupy a special place at the College,” she said, “but I also want them to be fully integrated in campus life.”

They shine in their Honors seminars, but they also raise the bar for their peers, faculty, and coaches. “I think the LLC exemplifies how hard we work at this: The students have a terrific space to work, share, and live, and yet exists in the midst of Ursula, with a wonderful diversity of students who are not in the Honors Program right down the hall.”
Whether they’ve come to the College straight from high school and are embarking on their careers, or now seek to change or advance their careers after many years, CNR graduates share the common bond of the quality educational foundation they receive. Meet some of our recent graduates.

ALUMNAE/I PROFILES

BLANCA PACCHA SAS’08

Blanca Paccha has fond memories of childhood fun amid the cows, sheep, and piglets on her family’s farm back in Ecuador. Today she studies the dangers that can lurk behind this seemingly wholesome pastoral setting.

As a research assistant in occupational and environmental health at Yale School of Medicine, Blanca is working to protect farm employees from zoonotic diseases—infections such as swine flu and SARS that humans can catch from livestock or other animals.

With more awareness, she says, “The hope is that more people take preventive steps such as wearing masks and gloves. And with greater understanding of how the health of humans and animals is tied together, veterinarians and doctors can work together more closely.”

It was Blanca’s CNR biology degree that led her to a master’s in public health at Yale, where her studies focus on microbial diseases and how they spread.

“CNR science classes such as Immunology and Microbiology were where my interest in the field really came to light. Back home there would be outbreaks of cholera or other diseases, and no one knew why people were dying. But now I was seeing the science behind these diseases and how even simple measures like hand-washing could prevent many deaths.

“So, I hope my work will help people like those in my country”—which she left at age 13 for a family visit that turned into a new life here in America.

Land of Opportunity

Blanca’s father was already working in New York when she first traveled to the U.S. at age 13. “I begged my parents to let me stay because I liked it here and saw the opportunities. My mother’s life was back home, but she sacrificed for me and stayed with me here.”

Life in America was “very different,” Blanca laughs. “I asked my father what all the yellow buses were, and he explained how students here get a free ride to school, as well as free books. We paid to ride dangerous little trucks that were always breaking down.”

Blanca was barely starting to learn English, but once the family settled in Connecticut she quickly caught up, earning honors at Norwalk High School.

“I wasn’t sure exactly where it might lead, but I just knew I had to do well in school. When my guidance counselor asked what I was going to do after graduating, I told her, ‘Work, like everyone in my family.’ But she encouraged me to go to college and put me in touch with schools such as CNR.

“This was the school I really liked, and my parents were happy because it was all-female. They were nervous about letting me go away to school.
In Ecuador, girls stay home until they marry.”

Blanca credits CNR professors such as Dr. Lynn Petrullo with giving her a firm foundation in conducting research “in the library, in the lab, and in the field. I have always felt very well prepared.”

The Human Factor

Winning a National Institutes of Health (NIH) scholarship to help finish school, Blanca did some basic research with NIH in Bethesda, MD. She then learned about the public health program at Yale, in New Haven, CT.

“I didn’t see myself working solely in a lab for the rest of my life. By combining my research skills with public health experience, I feel more prepared to go out and help poor communities.”

Blanca worked with the Yale-Connecticut Emerging Infections Program while finishing her master’s in 2012, then landed her current Yale job studying occupational health threats.

Much of her work has centered on animal-borne diseases—including nasty pandemic threats such as SARS (contracted from various species), Ebola (primates), and hantavirus (rodents). Research teams are studying livestock in Minnesota and Washington State, pig farmers in Romania, even butchers and live-game markets in China.

“We take samples from the humans and animals to see if there’s some correlation. I help design the studies, get approvals, do interviews, analyze the samples.” She also helped build a mathematical model to estimate farmhands’ health risk when their pigs are sick, and the risk to pigs when a farmhand is ill. “That’s how swine flu originated in the first place.”

Blanca may someday pursue another medical degree that would allow her to work directly with individual patients. “That way I’d be able to tie the individual cure to the research.”

And basic lab research can be frustrating at times, she admits, because scientists rarely get to see immediate results. “But someone has to do it, and you hope that eventually it will lead to something good.”

JESSICA JENKINS GS’05

Principals often develop close emotional ties with their schools, but leaving was especially heart-wrenching for Jessica Jenkins. Staten Island’s Marsh Avenue Expeditionary Learning School wasn’t just her place of work, it was her labor of love.

“Saying goodbye to the staff and teachers at Marsh was the hardest thing I’ve ever had to do,” Jessica admits. “My new job I can manage, but that was very hard.”

The new job—community superintendent for District 31, overseeing Staten Island’s 59 elementary and intermediate schools—won’t be easy. And Jessica’s relationship with those 59 principals will be especially crucial.

But they know she can walk the walk—as founding principal at Marsh, a highly regarded facility that would never have opened without her.

Creating the Culture

Starting out as a special-ed teacher and guidance counselor at a public school in Queens, Jessica heard how Mayor Bloomberg was trying to create new small public schools to spread successful practices and replace failing institutions.

“I wanted to replicate on a larger scale what I was already doing—a hands-on, project-based philosophy that emphasized student involvement. So in 2007 I began working on a...”

When you open up a school, everything is important—you’re in charge of creating the culture. You have to go out and find teachers who are in line with the mission and the vision. —JESSICA JENKINS

Jessica found an ally through the application process in NYC Outward Bound, a not-for-profit that champions this “expeditionary learning” approach. “They also agreed to partner with me if my school won approval.”

And that was one big “If,” because less than 40 proposals got thumbs up from the city that year out of more than 500. But Jessica’s presentation was a winner, with her new grade 6-8 school slated to open on Staten Island in the fall of 2008.

“When you open up a school, everything is important—you’re in charge of creating the culture. You have to go out and find teachers who are in line with the mission and the vision. We also went all over Staten Island to recruit children,” not just to fill seats but to attract a student body reflecting the entire community.

And today Marsh “has become a top choice for middle school on Staten Island,” says the independent online guide Inside Schools. Families are attracted by the welcoming environment and creative curriculum, Inside Schools reports, quoting Jessica on why students sit together in groups rather than in rows: “Life is not in rows.”

Under Jessica’s watch, Marsh tripled its enrollment to 450 and draws more than 2,000 yearly applications. “We got the word out and people were really excited about the idea. My teachers and I built the school together and we developed a great reputation.”

Learning Curve
A Red Bank, NJ, resident raised on eastern Long Island, Jessica earned a sociology degree from SUNY-Stony Brook and was planning on law school. But, “starting to feel that this wasn’t my thing,” in 1999 she looked instead into substitute teaching at Intermediate 73, a large comprehensive school in Maspeth, Queens.

The principal’s answer: “Can you start Monday?” With teachers in short supply, “I was told I had what was needed to go right into a special education classroom, full-time.

“At first I didn’t even know what a lesson plan was, and here I was working with students who had speech problems, emotional or learning disabilities. I spent my nights planning ways for them to learn the content but also be actively engaged all day long.”

Intuitively using counseling strategies, Jessica began thinking about a master’s in guidance and counseling and chose CNR for its hands-on approach. She became guidance counselor at her Maspeth school, “which was great because I could continue my work but with more one-on-one attention.” She next served as assistant principal, then became an institutional coach for the city’s schools before launching Marsh and settling in as principal for its first five years.

“I’d just started exploring future ideas for my career, and right before Labor Day a phone call came,” offering the superintendent’s position.

“I had to do a lot of thinking about what it would mean to leave my school. I had started this learning community, so I was very attached to it. But we had people I was confident about turning things over to.”

Jessica’s new post gives her final say on teacher tenure, and she also meets with parent groups “to make sure they have a voice”—and to reassure them on issues such as the state-mandated Common Core curriculum.

“There’s more rigor, higher expectations to be college- and career-ready. Parents and students alike are nervous. Fortunately, the parents of Staten Island are very involved, so we have a lot of entry points to talk with them on how they can help their kids.”

There’s still “a big learning curve” to Jessica’s new position, especially because the school year was already underway when the appointment was made.

“But I feel very comfortable supporting the schools as a leader, and I have my own experience to build upon. The district’s principals know I totally understand their job because I just was a principal myself.”
RAULDON BOYCE SN’12

Nervously unsure about his future, Rauldon Boyce took one of those career aptitude tests. The results suggested the lifelong New Yorker become . . . a farmer?

“I didn’t know where I was going to find a job like that in Brooklyn,” Rauldon recalls.

Fortunately, one of his pals had some much better advice: “Whatever you’re doing, stop it right now and become a nurse.”

“I didn’t even know there were male nurses,” Rauldon admits, “but that’s what he was, and he said men are very valued in the profession.”

So the NYU grad came to CNR, studied nursing, and has quickly become a valued part of the team at North Shore-Long Island Jewish Hospital in New Hyde Park. A two-month internship helped him land a job in the cardiac telemetry unit, packed with special equipment to keep close watch on heart patients.

“In telemetry monitoring, pain is the most important thing; any change might be crucial. Patients might have all kinds of tubes and incisions, so you also must be alert for infection. I love the patients and I love the challenge.”

And now the 29-year-old is training for a move to the cardiothoracic ICU, caring for heart and lung patients right out of surgery. “It’s the patient’s most vulnerable stage,” he says, “and the biggest challenge you can have as a nurse.”

People, Not Paperwork

Considering a career as a physician when he enrolled at NYU, Rauldon was volunteering at St. Vincent’s Hospital in Manhattan. “I’d bring a computer around the children’s ward, play games with the kids, help them look up info about their illnesses.”

But some of what he saw left a sour taste—doctors spending too little time with patients and listening too little as well. “Medicine seemed to be more about paperwork than dealing with people.”

So Rauldon temporarily dropped his health care plans. “I’d been taking some African studies and my counselor suggested a major in that, with a minor in economics so I could get some kind of job.”

He finished that degree when his friend suggested nursing and another urged him to consider CNR. “I thought she was joking, that it was an all-girls school.

“But they do take men, and there were eight or nine other guys in my Nursing 1 section. The women there were very fair, very accepting of the male perspective. I even became the first male president of CNR’s Student Nurses Association.”

Of the more than three million licensed RNs in the U.S., less than 10 percent are male. But their ranks are growing, and Rauldon says he’s found that “female nurses welcome a male presence in the group.”

But what about patients? “They do seem surprised to learn I’m their nurse. At first they’ll often think I must be the doctor.” Rauldon says older female patients generally like having a male nurse, though younger women can be hesitant. “And the men don’t really care either way.”

Last Line of Defense

Assigned to just one or two ICU patients at a time, Rauldon enjoys the extensive care he can devote to each.

JEANNINE PETRAGLIA
SNR’09, GS’11

“School secretaries are right on the front lines,” says Jeannine Petraglia. “We’re usually the first person to deal with someone who’s upset or has a problem. We’re constantly defusing situations, bringing students or parents down to a calmer tone. When someone needs a little TLC, that’s what we can offer.”

So with two decades on the job—think of it as concierge, traffic cop, and psychologist all rolled into one—the Bronx native began to see guidance counseling as a natural fit for her talents.

And today Jeannine is in her third year as one of two counselors at Van Nest Academy for Environmental Health Sciences & Technology, a highly ranked Bronx K-8 public school.

“The students feel comfortable about coming to us, and we’re a support system for teachers who might be having problems with a student. Our whole staff works together to identify children who are at-risk, who might have been fine but now are expressing some crisis in their lives.

“Counseling fits right in with what I was already doing, but thanks to my CNR studies I feel more prepared and confident. I used to bring children to someone in the school who could help them. Now I’m that person.”

You Can’t Fake Genuine
Jeannine joined New York City’s schools in 1990 as a secretary in the District 8 superintendent’s office. “It was a regular office job—steno, phones, filing, interacting with the district’s administrators.”

But when she moved to Bronx PS 75 as a school secretary five years later, “I was working more closely with the kids, and that sparked my passion for these young lives.

“The students who were sent to the office for misbehaving would wind up at my desk. I’d talk with them and delve deeper into their feelings. One first-grade student even wrote me a letter apologizing and describing how she was mistreated at home.

“Kids know when you’re genuine and when you’re faking it, so I was inspired by the way they would open up to me. It just felt like a natural progression to become a guidance counselor—though I knew I needed professional training to really help.”

So at age 37, with a few community-college credits under her belt, Jeannine looked into the College’s School of New Resources. “Dr. Kristine Southard of New Resources has been my support system, right to this day.”

Earning a BA in psychology at the Co-op City Campus, Jeannine added a master’s in guidance and counseling at CNR’s Graduate School, along with advanced career certifications.

“K ids know w hen you’re genuine and when you’re faking it, so I was inspired by the way they would open up to me. It just felt like a natural progression to become a guidance counselor—though I knew I needed professional training to really help.”

We Are Family
“Little kids, little problems, big kids, bigger problems,” is one way Jeannine looks at K-8 counseling. “You have to know how to change your tone based on the age group and severity of the situation.”

In the younger grades those problems often involve focusing—a student has trouble paying attention, then starts misbehaving as he falls further behind. Parents are brought into the loop to help determine if ADHD or some other disability may be the cause. Middle-schoolers present a wider range of situations. “Van Nest students respect the school’s rules and expectations, and we don’t allow any inappropriate behavior here,” Jeannine explains. “But you know at that age they’re going to try.”

Along with the occasional discipline problem, “there might be a family situation or just someone who needs a pep talk, and you try to find out why they’re having a bad day.

“The biggest challenge is, as much as you think you’re reaching a person, you can’t be with them once they leave.”

His long-term goal is a specialty in anesthesiology. He’s also applying for a master’s so he can do some teaching. One word of advice he has for today’s nursing students: Be vigilant, but realize that mistakes will happen.

“I’ve given a medication at the wrong time. Own up to it, learn from it, and stay persistent. My whole career has been like that. I feel now that I’ve ended up where I was supposed to be, and that I wouldn’t be the nurse I am if I hadn’t gone to CNR.”

individual. “We’re the last line of defense and we’re expected to use our clinical judgment.

“The doctors ask for our input and really do value our opinions. They understand the disease process, but we’re the ones at the bedside who fill in the personal details. They’ll ask if someone’s ready to go home and we’ll say no, they can’t do this or that.

“The whole motto of CNR nursing,” Rauldon adds, “is to look at the patient as a human being, not just a disease.

“I had one older patient who’d had surgery and developed an infection. I noticed she was having a birthday, and called Dietary to have a cake made up. Everyone came in and sang ‘Happy Birthday,’ and at least we got to see her smiling.”

Rauldon is used to seeing people at their worst. “They’re sick, they’re grumpy, they might lash out at the nurse because we’re the one who’s there. But we’re professionals and we know it’s not personal. And it’s very rewarding to see people get better.”

For adults, continuing your education can be scary”—especially if you’re working full-time, volunteering with youth groups after school, and raising a godson, Mark, to adulthood from age two.

“It was tough getting home at 9:30 each night, but I took it all head-on.”

We Are Family
“Little kids, little problems, big kids, bigger problems,” is one way Jeannine looks at K-8 counseling. “You have to know how to change your tone based on the age group and severity of the situation.”

In the younger grades those problems often involve focusing—a student has trouble paying attention, then starts misbehaving as he falls further behind. “Girls often may not feel fully empowered to raise their hand in class even if they know the answer,” explains Damary Bonilla-Rodriguez. “It all translates to the workplace, to the boardroom, the feeling that you don’t fully belong.

“But you can always recognize a Girls Inc. girl,” she adds, “because she can stand up before a group and tell about her journey.”

And that’s just what Damary does, offering her own life’s journey for inspiration as Latina Initiative Manager with Girls Inc., as well as an independent expert in leadership development and organizational communications.

Formerly known as the Girls Clubs of America, Girls Inc. provides academic and social programs to help young females gain confidence, resist social pressures, and reach their potential.

“I’m a Girls Inc. girl myself, and the experience was so important to me because I never got to go anywhere or have fun with other girls when I was young. I remember going on a Girls Inc. ski trip upstate and marveling at the mountains all around me. I felt so free!”

Growing up in the projects of Spanish Harlem, Damary was raised by her maternal grandparents after her mother took a fatal bullet meant for a friend.

Her guardians had little education and no English, so young Damary was thrust into a leadership role as she helped them cope and fended for her two little sisters.

“All this responsibility led to where I am today”—working at Girls Inc., coaching institutions on how to phrase their message, and reaching out to women through outlets such as the ELLA Leadership Institute.

Ella is Spanish for “her,” Damary notes, and as a faculty member she creates online courses, webinars, and in-person presentations to inspire future Latina achievers.

“I presented a session at a conference, and at the end a woman came up to me, a single mother. She said she’d been struggling to earn a BA for ten years now and was ready to give up. I told her, ‘Why limit yourself to ten years? Why not keep trying?’ And she said I’d inspired her to carry on. When you hear something like that, it stays with you.”

In Love With Learning

After Damary’s mother was murdered, her grandmother was understandably protective. When the teen took an overnight trip to tour CNR’s campus, “I still recall her warning me, ‘Don’t take your socks off when you take a shower.’

Fortunately, CNR was close and it was all-girls, so she let me enroll. My sisters ended up going here as well.”

Earning her BA in Spanish and social work, then a master’s in communications, “I just fell in love with learning at CNR. My Spanish professor was a Latina who had earned a doctorate and had traveled the world—it was the first time I’d met anyone like that.”

Starting as a Girls Inc. receptionist, Damary now creates discussion sessions and other resources supporting local

Nearly 15 years after his 15 minutes of fame, Michael Williams still gets “some funny looks” from people who think they must know him from somewhere.

“Especially around Halloween,” the Thornwood, NY, native says, “when the movie gets played a lot.”

That movie is The Blair Witch Project, and Michael was one of those three ill-fated folks being tracked through the woods by some unseen horror, in one of the most famously frightening films of all time.

But when the movie and TV job offers soon dried up, Michael faced an even scarier prospect: bringing down the curtain on the career he loved and finding a steadier way to earn a living.

By his mid-30s Michael had two children of his own and was teaching acting to young people as well. “I found I loved being around kids— their energy, their thirst for knowledge, their different take on life.”

So he earned a master’s in guidance and counseling at CNR, and in 2010 assumed his new starring role with the K-8 school district in Garrison.

“I had committed myself to being an actor—committed to auditioning, meeting people, getting my foot in the door, and keeping it there. I never thought I could love anything more than being onstage and creating a role.

“But going back to school helped me let go of it slowly. Right from my first CNR class I knew I’d made the right decision.”

chaplars’ efforts to reach America’s fast-growing Latina population. “And these ideas can help expand services to other groups as well.

“When I’m talking about diversity, inclusion, or communication, I always say I’m not here to teach you, but to help you think about things differently. People work so hard in the day-to-day rush that they often don’t have time to think about larger issues.”

And Damary’s number-one issue is encouraging women toward positions of leadership—not just in the boardroom, but in their community, church, or family. “Not everyone wants to be CEO, but you can stand up and be valued for the work you do. Maybe you want to be an entrepreneur or run for office—I advise a lot of Latinas on this now.

school, “so if someone has a problem they won’t be afraid to go see Mr. Williams.”

The internet, Michael adds, has posed an “enormous” new set of problems. “Kids are growing up super-fast because of all the information they can get.

“I just did a presentation on this for parents. We can’t just tell kids, ‘Go use the computer.’ We have to be there with them. The language can be incredibly vile. When we were young, someone might write something bad about you on the restroom wall. But now, the cyber-bullying can follow everywhere you go.”

Michael also worries that children are spending too much time home alone with smartphones and video games.

“We played ball, rode bikes, learned how to get a group together after school without texting and without adult supervision. We got into fights and stuff but learned how to settle them ourselves. Kids today are missing out on this.

“That’s why, when someone comes to me with a problem, I don’t give answers, I help create options. The term ‘bullying’ can be overused—it’s often just a conflict. And youngsters need to learn how to resolve it.”

Does Michael’s dramatic training come in handy in counseling?

“When good actors play a scene together, they’re very aware of what their partner is doing. This helps me sense when someone is getting heared and I need to cool things down. If I start yelling, too, we’re both in trouble.”

The Witching Hour

Living back in Thornwood, the former Blair Witch star is married to his boyhood sweetheart, Toni, now a teacher’s aide at their old high school, Westlake.

Michael was about to join the Army after high school when Westlake’s guidance counselor, Donna Garr, told him about the theater program at SUNY-New Paltz.

“My dad had passed away when I was 15, and I always had great support from Donna. She saw talent in me I didn’t know I had. And that’s kind of when this interest in guidance counseling started for me.”

After graduation Michael snagged a job as a production assistant on The Sopranos, filming in Astoria. Despite the lofty title, the job mostly involved chauffeuring cast and crew, fetching coffee, and trucking equipment around.

“But I wanted to be where the action was, not just waiting tables while I was looking for parts. When you’re 22 you’re excited to just be working and making connections.”

Michael made his biggest connection when he spotted a small ad in Backstage magazine. “It said it was for an improvised feature film to be shot in the woods. I loved improv and I’m big on camping and fishing. So I went.”

Cast and crew spent eight days tromping around in a forest to film Blair Witch, with the flick finally premiering 18 months later, in July 1999.

“That’s why, when someone comes to me with a problem, I don’t give answers, I help create options. The term ‘bullying’ can be overused—it’s often just a conflict. And youngsters need to learn how to resolve it.”

VICTOR FRANKLIN
SNR’11

As an Army drill sergeant, Victor Franklin had no problem getting his platoon’s attention.

“When I’m at home I don’t curse,” says the soft-spoken former Floridian. “But I was like a plumber who takes his entire toolbox to a job. If I had to yell and scream and curse to motivate someone, that’s a tool I would use.”

Now working toward a master’s at CNR, Victor no longer needs to raise his voice. But his communication skills are still being put to good use, as leader of Brother 2 Brother—a newly resurgent campus program that’s encouraging his fellow men to make the grade.

“Dr. Darryl Jones, SNR’s dean, was talking with me about my experiences and what had brought me back to college, and he thought I might be able to resurrect B2B.

“I did some research and found that having a support system makes graduation more likely.” That’s especially true for minorities at largely white schools, Victor notes, but he emphasizes that B2B is for men of all races and backgrounds.

“Men are often not the type to reach out emotionally. So we try to get them to study together, talk about grades, take advantage of tutoring, and understand that asking for help is not a sign of weakness.”

24-Hour Jobs

“If someone is losing the determination to finish their degree,” Victor says, “I’ll ask what they were hoping to get from college. Even when you go to the grocery store you need a goal and a purpose. And CNR is good about this because you have to write about yourself and reflect on where you want to go.”

Now 53, the Jacksonville native had no clear destination when he joined the Army back in 1978, eventually becoming a drill sergeant at Fort Gordon, GA.

“It was fun because you could see the end result, watch how new recruits improved physically and in the classroom.”

Leaving the military in 1990, Victor began driving a hotel courtesy bus. Hanging out at the front desk, he picked up tips on how a hotel runs—and soon found himself running one. From that Best Western in Georgia he rose to supervisor at major Sheraton and Ramada sites in New Jersey.

“I really enjoyed my years in the hotel industry, especially training the employees. It worked right in with what I’d been doing as a drill sergeant.

“But most of my jobs, in the military and at hotels, involved 24-hour workplaces that never closed. Eventually I began to feel I wanted to do something different.”

That’s when the pastor and several parishioners at St. Charles Borromeo, Victor’s Harlem church, suggested SNR.
surprised at first, but then my mom brought CNR to my attention.” One of Suzanne’s aunts—Disney Media executive Anne Sweeney—had graduated from CNR.

“I figured if my parents liked something, I probably wouldn’t,” Suzanne admits with a laugh. “But when I toured the campus everyone was so friendly. And the nursing school offered the individual attention I thought was important. When I got my job three months after graduating, I felt CNR had prepared me for a leadership role, equipped me to be an advocate for my patients.”

Suzanne had already showed that generous spirit at CNR, earning the Serviam Award for her work on Midnight Runs for New York City’s homeless, a home-repair project for hurricane victims in New Orleans, and a spring break mission to treat leprosy patients in Ecuador.

“I’ve always wanted to do work like that, and the Campus Ministry gave me the opportunity. The purpose was to help other people, but I found that meeting them helped me grow as well.”

So when NYU Medical Center was shut down for three months by 2012’s Superstorm Sandy, Suzanne signed on with a volunteer group to provide medical care for the dispossessed.

“Families were in turmoil, people were paying mortgages on houses that were no longer there. It was nursing with some social work thrown in.”

Best of Both Worlds

Suzanne hopes to someday become a family nurse practitioner, providing the preventative care that could head off many of the problems she sees at the hospital. Simply curbing diabetes through diet and lifestyle would be an important step against stroke, which kills some 130,000 Americans every year.

“I’ve always had an interest in how the body works and in helping people, so I decided nursing was the best of both worlds. Physicians often focus on the science without making a connection with the patient. In nursing, you can make that connection with the patient and the family.”

But the job does have its dark side.

“In neuroscience we see patients with conditions that devastate their lives, leave once-active people in wheelchairs for life. You just have to help them cope and stay positive yourself.

“One thing that helps is how supportive the nurses are of each other. When I was observing in an ICU during school, one thing they’d advise is to leave the baggage at work, don’t bring it all home or you’ll burn out.”

In one particularly haunting scenario, patients who have been ruled brain-dead—often following a stroke or ruptured aneurysm—must still be kept on life support while organ donations are approved and arranged.

“We see a lot of young people in this unit,” Suzanne adds. “When I see something so sad, like a 26-year-old girl who is brain-dead, I just try to appreciate life more. You never know what’s coming next.”

“I’d taken some community college courses in the Army, and it was always my desire to complete my education.”

Enrolling in 2008 to earn a BA in social science, Victor now is pursuing a master’s in public administration that builds upon his leadership experience. He has also volunteered as a classroom aide and might go into teaching—a field he feels is crying out for more men.

“So many children today are growing up in single-parent homes, and they’re not getting that male role model which research has shown is so important.”

Brother’s Keepers

Thanks to Victor’s recruiting, small Brother 2 Brother groups now meet regularly at the Co-op City, Rosa Parks, and John Cardinal O’Connor campuses, and he is working to establish a chapter at the Main Campus.

“We look at developing study skills and creating study groups. This is so important, because different people give you added perspective. Women are really good at study groups, men are not.”

Victor also arranges visits from inspirational entrepreneurs and executives—including his wife, Carla Harris, a top investment banker with Morgan Stanley. High school friends back in Jacksonville, the pair wed in 2001 and now live in Montclair, NJ.

B2B sessions often look ahead to life after college—resumes, networking, “not just waiting until graduation to plan a career.

“One thing we ask is, will the people at your current job just see you as the same person you were before your degree? If that’s so, you need to look for someplace that will value your education.”

Earning that degree, Victor tells his fellow men, “is an investment in yourself. People can take many things away from you, but once you have an education, you’ll always have it. And it’s up to you to put it to use.”
CNR Joins in Celebrating New Rochelle’s 325th Anniversary

For 109 years, The College of New Rochelle has been an integral part of the City of New Rochelle, providing a quality and affordable education for its residents through our four Schools and participating as a good citizen by supporting community organizations. Thus it was particularly fitting for the College to join the city in celebrating its 325th Anniversary this past year.

“We have partnered with the city on numerous endeavors. Our nursing students do clinical placements at Sound Shore Medical Center, our social work students do field work at nursing homes and other facilities, our education students student teach and do field work in New Rochelle schools,” said CNR President Judith Huntington. “These are just a few of the many examples of the impact The College of New Rochelle has in the community. We are so proud to call New Rochelle our home for more than a century.”

In January 2013, city and local school officials gathered in Leland Castle Parlors for the announcement by President Huntington of the creation of the City of New Rochelle Resident Award in honor of the city’s 325th anniversary. The annual scholarship, up to $9,000, is open to any New Rochelle resident who is accepted and enrolls in either the College’s School of Arts & Sciences or School of Nursing.

“This generous scholarship does more than honor our community’s past, it also helps uphold and expand the educational opportunities that will ensure for New Rochelle a bright future,” said New Rochelle Mayor Noam Bramson.

“The College of New Rochelle is one of the earliest sponsors of the 325th Anniversary, and their generosity continues as a legacy with this substantial scholarship,” said Hon. Marianne L. Sussman, 325th Anniversary Chair. “It celebrates both the historic occasion of the city’s anniversary and the strong positive role The College of New Rochelle has always played in the New Rochelle community.”

In November, the College celebrated the legacy of E.L. Doctorow, one of New Rochelle’s most well-known citizens, during a series of highly regarded performances by CNR Drama of Ragtime, the musical based on Doctorow’s 1975 novel.

President Huntington welcomed the sold out crowd to a Saturday performance, which included Bramson, Sussman, and members of the 325th Anniversary committee. Bramson then presented a citation and the key to the city to Caroline Doctorow, who accepted them on behalf of her father.

“My father and my mother are both so proud to have called New Rochelle home for more than 35 years,” said Doctorow. “It’s wonderful to be back here today and to see this city thriving as we help celebrate its 325th year here on the beautiful campus of The
CNR Honored for Distinctive Educational Excellence

The College of New Rochelle has been recognized as a “College of Distinction” for its excellence in student-focused higher education.

“Schools designated as ‘Colleges of Distinction’ create well-rounded graduates and are among the very best in the country,” said Tyson Schritter, Executive Editor of Colleges of Distinction. Colleges and universities are nominated for participation in Colleges of Distinction through high school counselors’ recommendations as well as quantitative research.

Once nominated, the colleges are assessed using the Four Distinctions: student engagement, quality of teaching, vibrancy of the college community, and success of graduates. Schools featured on CollegesofDistinction.com must meet minimum standards in each category.

In the category of student engagement, CNR stood out for its Honors and Study Abroad programs, the internships and clinical placements students take part in, and its tradition of serving others. The College has been named to the President's Higher Education Community Service Roll for the last four years.

The College of New Rochelle was also noted for the variety of student activities on campus, including its NCAA Division III athletic teams, arts and cultural organizations, and service and spiritual opportunities. CNR’s Living Learning Communities also contribute to the vibrancy of campus life.

CNR Named to President’s Community Service Honor Roll for Fourth Year

For the fourth consecutive year, The College of New Rochelle has been named to the President’s Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll—the highest federal recognition a college or university can receive for its commitment to volunteering, service-learning, and civic engagement.

Over 2,200 CNR students completed 165,000 hours of service during the academic year. The College was recognized for three specific programs.

The Chemistry Department continued their collaboration with the Westchester County Department of Planning to monitor the Westchester County Watershed. CNR students worked at Tibbetts Brook Park in Yonkers to provide analyses for studies that are an important component of Westchester County’s comprehensive water quality protection program.

Campus Ministry sponsored a service trip to aid in disaster relief after the tornadoes in Joplin, MO. CNR students painted and made repairs to a family’s house and property damaged during the tornado. Students also helped refurbish the new Catholic Charities office in Joplin and organized supplies at a distribution center.

Eighteen students from the School of New Resources and a biology faculty instructor participated in a one-day cleanup of Muskrat Cove, a forested woodland area along the Bronx River, as part of a summer Environmental Wellness course.

Each year CNR students participate in numerous service activities. Among them are Midnight Runs to New York City to help the homeless, serving meals at HOPE Soup Kitchen, working with Habitat for Humanity, teaching ESL at the Adult Learning Center, and volunteering with seniors in assisted living programs in New Rochelle.

For the College’s seventh annual Community Service Day, CNR community members took part in a variety of activities, including collecting 350 books for preschoolers, hosting a luncheon for senior citizens, collecting school supplies for students living in homeless shelters and food for residents of domestic violence shelters, and hosting a basketball tournament for over 100 athletes with disabilities.
Alumna and Disney/ABC Exec Anne Sweeney Praises Graduates for Pushing Beyond Boundaries at Commencement

The College held its 106th commencement ceremony at Radio City Music Hall, conferring degrees on approximately 1,000 students who heard an inspiring commencement address from Anne Sweeney, Co-chair of Disney Media Networks and President of Disney/ABC Television Group.

Sweeney, a 1979 CNR graduate, was presented with an honorary degree from CNR. Michael N. Ambler, Esq., the outgoing Chairman of CNR’s Board of Trustees, also received an honorary degree for his dedication to the College.

In her commencement address, Sweeney recalled her early years as a CNR student and how she was inspired by her medieval literature professor who introduced her to a lifelong love of storytelling.

“But then, as luck would have it, I paged at ABC my senior year and came to realize that the stories I was destined to live would play out on a different screen...or multiple screens,” she said.

“If there is one thing that I’ve learned throughout my life, it’s that inspiration happens when you least expect it...and oftentimes without you even knowing,” she said, adding, “I think CNR students understand better than most the value of using inspiration to pursue their life stories. You’ve pushed beyond the boundaries that could have defined you or the obstacles that could have stopped you. You are each the hero in your own epic tale.”

The Wellness Center Recognized for Superior Design

The Wellness Center continues to be recognized for its design, receiving a Silver Award from the Society of American Registered Architects during a banquet in October 2013.

The Wellness Center, designed by the firm Ikon.5 architects and completed in 2008, “merges the relationship between building and landscape, and in doing so reduces energy consumption and demonstrates good stewardship of the Earth,” according to the Society. The jury noted the “rich use of materials and sculpting light,” and said the garden “rejuvenates the body and mind.”

The Celebration of Architecture and Design Award Program was held at the ONE UN Plaza Hotel, during the Society’s 57th National Conference. Thirty-five architectural firms were honored for 56 design projects across the country. “This award not only recognizes the architect, but more importantly, the clients who support and encourage excellence,” said Joseph G. Tattoni, principal of Ikon.5.

The two-story, 54,000-square-foot structure includes a 1,500-seat gymnasium, competition-size pool, suspended running track, fitness and aerobics center, and classrooms. The use of recyclable and natural materials, grass roofs, day lighting, and ground-source heat pumps, among other features, earned the building LEED-Silver certification.

The Society’s award is the latest in a string of honors The Wellness Center has received. In 2010, it was one of 47 honorees out of 1,000 entries to receive the American Architecture Award from the Chicago Athenaeum: Museum of Architecture. It has been honored by the New York, Westchester/Mid-Hudson, and New Jersey chapters of the American Institute of Architects.

Volleyball Team Claims 2013 HVIAC Championship

The College of New Rochelle capped off a historic season by capturing the program’s third Hudson Valley Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Tournament Championship in the last five years, defeating top-seeded St. Joseph’s College-Brooklyn, 3-1, at The Wellness Center. Junior co-captain Meghan King was named HVIAC Tournament MVP.

King’s MVP honors are the culmination of a year that saw her set numerous program records for a game, season, and career. She tallied two double-doubles for the tournament and led the Blue Angels in kills in the semifinal win over Culinary Institute and the championship match victory over St. Joseph’s-Brooklyn.

Postseason accolades were plentiful for the Blue Angels, as King, Marissa Armstrong, and Indigo Flowers were named Volleyball All-HVIAC in a ceremony following the championship’s conclusion. Later in the month, King and Flowers were named First Team All-Independent by the Association of Division III Independents (AD3I), Armstrong was named Second Team All-Independent, and Tiany Perez Diaz and freshman Kylie Thesz were named All-Independent Honorable Mention. In addition, Flowers was named AD3I Rookie of the Year and Head Coach Georgia Efthalitis was named AD3I Coach of the Year.

The Blue Angels finished their historic season with a program-record 22 wins, becoming the first CNR volleyball team to eclipse the 20-win plateau, the first in any sport to reach that mark since the 1998-99 basketball team, and just the third team in the College’s NCAA history to reach that milestone.

The program record for wins was one of 30 individual and team records set or equaled during this memorable season. Individual records included Flowers establishing a new program record for aces in a season with 108. Her average of 0.92 aces per set ranked her second among all NCAA Division III student-athletes. Flowers also set new standards for assists in a match and season. King’s offensive prowess enabled her to set new match, season, and career kills records. Perez Diaz’s defensive efforts rewrote the digs in a match and season marks, and Thesz’s presence at the net set a new record for blocks in a season.

With all six starters returning, the future of the Blue Angel volleyball program looks bright, with many more records, accolades, and championships likely to follow.

Nursing School Project Becomes a Home Run

Maria Migliorato, RN, CLNC, found a unique way to combine the nursing profession with her lifelong devotion to the New York Mets baseball team.

While taking the Politics of Healthcare course at CNR taught by nursing professor Connie Vance, RN, EdD, FAAN, Migliorato and her classmates were challenged to come up with action projects that would put nursing in a positive light. In the past, Vance said student projects have included trying to stop a local library from closing, getting involved with health projects in the community, and contributing to change in a professional organization.

“What I stress is we need to see our profession as a big outreach, as having a big impact on society,” Vance said. “We have to take our professional expertise beyond the bedside and place it in a larger framework in the community.”

Students are encouraged to think outside the box, and Migliorato, a nurse for 28 years who works a few blocks from the Mets’ home, Citi Field, went way outside the box.

She contacted Eric Fox, a representative for the Mets, and convinced him that the team should recognize nurses at a game. On August 20, the Mets conducted their first Nurse Appreciation Night, with 265 nurses in attendance. Each received a Mets scrub top, and three nurses, including Migliorato, received Spirit Awards from the team in an on-field presentation before the game. Kim Bussa and Belinda Tarnish also were recognized with Spirit Awards.

The nurses sat together in the Big Apple Reserved section in the outfield and were featured on Citi Field’s giant scoreboard in center field.

“It was a night I’ll never forget,” Migliorato said. “It was just amazing.”

Migliorato also enjoyed her favorite team’s 5-3 victory that night against the Atlanta Braves.

Although on its surface Migliorato’s project sounds like it was just about nurses having a good time at a ballgame, classmate and fellow school nurse Ellen Lanzi, RN, saw it as much more.

“Like Migliorato, Lanzi is pursuing a BSN degree at CNR. Maria’s [project] had some serious notes as well in that nurses are underappreciated,” Lanzi said. “While it was a lot of fun, it was also very important to put a positive light on nursing in the community.”

While Vance credits Migliorato and a few of her classmates who helped spread the word about the Citi Field event for making it a success, Migliorato appreciates what Vance has instilled in her.

“My family was so proud of me,” Migliorato said. “And Dr. Vance is so enthusiastic with everything. She makes nurses feel like professionals.”

CNR BASKETBALL COACH NAMED COACH OF THE YEAR

Basketball head coach Kashif Hameed was named the 2012-13 Women’s Basketball Coach of the Year by the Hudson Valley Women’s Athletic Conference, while two of his players received multiple accolades, highlighting an excellent season for the Blue Angels.

Hameed, in his first season at the helm after several years as an assistant coach, led the team to ten wins—the most for a CNR squad since 1999-2000—and a berth in the HVWAC semifinals. The Blue Angels have now increased their win total for four straight seasons. Under Hameed’s tutelage, the Blue Angels improved in nearly every statistical category.

Last season, CNR players were named HVWAC Player of the Week on three occasions and HVWAC Rookie of the Week five times—just one shy of the conference record.

In addition, freshman center Jasmine Brandon was named to the HVWAC All-Conference Team for leading the Blue Angels with 16.8 points and 9.3 rebounds a game, while making 52 percent of her shots. Her field goal percentage was tops in the conference, and she ranked in the top ten in points, rebounds, free throw percentage, and steals.

This season, the Blue Angels got off to a fast and successful start for Coach Hameed, racing out to a 7-1 start, matching the best start in program history, established during the memorable 1984-85 season, which saw the College advance to the NCAA Division III National Championship game. The 7-1 start this season has included two tournament championships, the season-opening Bryn Mawr Women’s College Basketball Tip-Off Tournament and the Blue Angels’ first ever Dr. Betty Shabazz Tournament Championship.
CNR Welcomes Powerful Women in Communications

A wide-ranging discussion of the media and the role women play in the field drew 350 people to the College for the second Powerful Women Roundtable, co-sponsored by the College and Westfair Business Publications (owned by alumna Dee Delbello). Sharing their experiences at the event were Suzyn Waldman, Yankees radio commentator for WCBS, Paula Zahn, co-host of NYC-ARTS on Thirteen-WNET, and Valerie Salembr, an alumna of the School of New Resources and president and CEO of The Salembr Group.

Waldman, a pioneer among women in sports broadcasting, proved to be a crowd favorite with pithy and humorous responses to moderator Elizabeth Bracken Thompson’s questions. On whether she had ever experienced gender bias, she said, “Twenty-seven years of it.” Ever been told what to wear? “That’s pretty much why I was in radio.”

Their stories about fashion in the workplace, while funny, also illustrated the advances women have made in the past few decades. Waldman told of wearing a pantsuit to work and being ordered by then-Yankees owner George Steinbrenner to return the next day wearing a skirt.

Salembr shared the story of a human resources memo from 1967 alerting department heads of one employee’s purchase of a pantsuit. “If she continues to wear it to the office, she needs to be told to cease and desist.”

The three also illustrated the power of perseverance, and shared practical advice from their experiences.

Salembr went straight to work out of high school. “I figured I could do it my way,” she said, and worked her way up from being a receptionist at Time Inc. The turning point for

Successful Nurses Urge CNR Students to Look to the Future

Two highly successful nurses with strong ties to The College of New Rochelle encouraged School of Nursing seniors to look beyond their board exams and consider the future of their career at the annual Nursing Advocacy Forum. Brian Liu SN’07 and Dr. Launette Woolforde, who received a post-master’s certificate in nursing education from CNR, also emphasized the important part mentors have played in their professional lives.

Liu began by empathizing with the students getting ready to enter the work force. “I’ve experienced the same worries as you seniors,” he said. “I remember being in your seats right now.” While he urged students to “focus on your boards,” he also asked them to consider where they eventually wanted to be.

Upon graduating from the RN-to-BSN program, Liu worked at the Cardiothoracic ICU at New York- Presbyterian/Columbia University Medical Center. After three years, he took on another position at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center.

“But I really needed to do more, and I’m so glad I did,” said Liu, who applied to and was accepted into the nurse anesthetist program at the University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey, graduating this past January. He now works as a certified registered nurse anesthetist at Montefiore Medical Center’s Weiler Campus, and is looking at doctorate studies in the future.

“Nursing is never-ending learning,” said Liu. “It’s really how much you put into it. Don’t let anything stop you—the only thing that’s going to stop you is yourself.”

Liu also praised Dr. Connie Vance, Professor of Nursing, who has organized the Nurse Advocacy Forum with Dr. Deborah Hunt, Associate Professor of Nursing, for the past five years.

“Because of her, I’m a part of Healing the Children, providing anesthesia for Maria Rosa Doria Ribeiro brings a wealth of knowledge and research to her yearlong appointment at The College of New Rochelle, but she plans on leaving with some as well.

The Visiting Fulbright Scholar-in-Residence, in between teaching classes and helping develop a new curriculum, researched how immigrants from throughout Latin America live in New Rochelle and surrounding communities.

Last spring, Ribeiro, a professor at the University of Sao Paulo, in Brazil, taught Global and Transnational Feminisms. It covers the history of the feminist movement, why it is still important today, and “how feminism can get stronger for best results.” And in the fall, she taught a new course, Introduction to Latin American Studies, and a seminar on Latin American immigration.

Her students were engaged and interested. “I feel that what I say makes sense for them, and I’m very happy about that,” Ribeiro said. “It’s the best you could ask for, if you find a group of students that want to learn what you teach.”

Ribeiro holds a PhD in history from the University of Sao Paulo, and her dissertation tackled the emergence of feminism in Brazil in the context of the fight against a dictatorship. She also has a master’s in education from the University of Campinas.

In addition to teaching, Ribeiro helped develop a certificate program in Latin American/Caribbean Studies. Some necessary courses already exist, she says, but others need to be created. She says working with her colleagues at The College of New Rochelle was rewarding.

“The contact with my peers is very good,” she said. “We can exchange knowledge and experience, and we can work together...for me it’s a very rich process.”

Outside of the classroom, Ribeiro hopes to visit other parts of the country, particularly California and the West, and attend academic events. It is her third visit to the U.S., and her longest so far.

Ribeiro is looking forward to learning about the lives of Latin American people in this part of the United States. “I want to know, how is the integration of these people with the local community,” she said. “I hope to meet and talk to immigrants, see how they live together.”

For Woolforde, Director for Nursing Education and Professional Development at North Shore University Hospital, earning a doctorate didn’t always seem feasible. It’s a bit surprising, now that she’s been an RN for 20 years, earning a bachelor’s in nursing from Pace University, a master’s in adult health nursing from Hunter, a doctor of nursing practice from Case Western Reserve, and a doctor of education from Columbia.

But she was the first generation of her family to graduate from college, and she had doubts. “You know what it feels like when you can sense graduation,” Woolforde told the crowd of seniors. “You think, ‘I just want to finish this program!’” Vance, however, urged her to attend an open house at Columbia.

Woolforde asked members of the audience if they thought they were “Columbia material.” “I was in the portion of you who didn’t raise their hand,” she said. “I didn’t have Columbia money, or Columbia grades, or Columbia whatever. I went to that open house because someone that I admired thought I should go.”

Find a mentor who inspires you, Woolforde said. “It helps you to remain focused and on track,” when times get tough. Also, she said about Vance, “I couldn’t let her down.”

It’s important to commit to professional growth, said Woolforde, as the competition for jobs is stiff. She said she expected every senior to pass their boards, but beyond that, “you have to make yourself stand out.”

Elizabeth Bell LeVaca has been named Chair of the College’s Board of Trustees, succeeding Michael Ambler.

The daughter of alumna Mary Fischer Bell SAS’34, Elizabeth LeVaca is a generous and enthusiastic supporter of the College. She served on the Board of Trustees from 2001 to 2009 and from 2010 to present.

A registered nurse, LeVaca earned her bachelor’s degree in nursing and certifications as a clinical nursing specialist and as a nurse practitioner from The Catholic University of America. She has been a member of Sigma Theta Tau, the Nursing Honor Society, for more than two decades.

The mother of two, she is a past board member for the AIDS/HIV Services Group in Charlottesville, VA, the Hospice of DC, and the Martha Jefferson Hospital Foundation. She is the founder of the Ralph & Mary Fischer Bell Foundation, which provides scholarships to various schools and organizations.

“The College is very blessed that Elizabeth Bell LeVaca continues the enduring history started by her mother, Mary Fischer Bell, nearly 83 years ago, and to have had Elizabeth’s extraordinary leadership and guidance for many years now,” said CNR President Judith Huntington. “I look forward to working with her to continue to advance The College of New Rochelle.”

CNR Celebrates Service in Many Forms on Founder’s Day

The College of New Rochelle celebrated Mother Irene Gill, long-serving faculty and staff, and students who have made a difference in their communities at the annual Founder’s Day in October.

At a College Community luncheon, four students were awarded Serviam Awards, which honor students who best embody the Ursuline philosophy of Serviam—meaning “I will serve”—and support the College’s mission of education for service. This year’s recipients included Luisa Garcia of the School of Arts & Sciences, Amber Pennant of the School of Nursing, Christine Gilliam of the School of New Resources, and Denise Warner of the Graduate School.

Garcia was recognized for her volunteer work with Queens Las Americas Lions Club. She has helped feed the homeless, organized clothing drives, cleaned parks and planted trees, visited with the elderly, and participated in walks to support health-related causes. On campus, she has worked on Tatler newspaper and Phoenix magazine, and is seen as a peer mentor, sharing her broadcasting skills with the club Blue Angel Media and educating fellow students about internship opportunities and grants.

Pennant has served as a student mentor with the Student Nurses Association, which she now leads as president. She volunteers at the Bronx Teen Health Center at Morris Heights Health Center, where she has shared her story of overcoming obstacles to find success.

Gilliam serves as a mentor and community activist and has organized clothing drives for survivors of domestic violence and their children. She volunteers at Breukelen Community Center and Cumberland Diagnostic and Treatment Center. She ran a poetry writing workshop, called Finding My Voice, for girls eight to 12 years old, and has served as a speaker and poet for those dealing with intimate partner violence and chemical dependency.

Warner, a student representative to the College Senate, is a volunteer at Dewitt Reformed Church, working in its food pantry, distributing food to those in need. She also helps provide breakfast to the elderly before church services on Sundays.

President Judith Huntington also recognized the service anniversaries of faculty and staff who have worked at the College for a decade or more.

This year’s longest-serving faculty honoree was Dr. Teri Kwal Gamble, Professor of Communications in the Graduate School, who has taught at the College for 35 years.
The College of New Rochelle Welcomes New Members to Board of Trustees

The College welcomed three members to the Board of Trustees in October. Karen Calo and Cynthia DiPietrantonio were appointed for their first term, while Diana Stano, OSU, who previously served on the Board for four terms from 1999 to 2012, has been reappointed for a fifth term.

Karen Calo is Vice President of Human Resources, Systems and Technology Group and Integrated Supply Chain at IBM, a position she has held since 2008. In this position, she has had HR responsibility for approximately 50,000 employees globally. She is also a member of the HR Operating Team, comprised of the worldwide senior executives in the human resources function of IBM and a member of IBM’s Integration and Values Team.

Since joining IBM in 1980, Calo has held human resources staff and management positions in various IBM locations, including corporate headquarters, the field, research, and the IBM Consulting Group. She has been Director of Human Resources Global Services, Asia Pacific, residing in Singapore; Vice President Global Staffing; Vice President Human Resources Software Group; Vice President Human Resources Business Consulting Services; and prior to her current role, served as Vice President Global Talent.

A CNR alumna who earned her BA in psychology in 1979, she also received an MBA from Pace University.

Over the course of her 30-year tenure at The Jones Group, DiPietrantonio has held positions of progressive responsibility. Currently, as COO of The Jones Group, DiPietrantonio oversees the company’s day-to-day operations, including Systems and Technology, Logistics and Operations, Customer Service, Imports, Customs, Compliance, and Distribution and Production. Her responsibilities also include The Jones Group’s Hong Kong offices and its production offices in China.

In addition to her corporate responsibilities, DiPietrantonio serves as Co-chair and a member of the Board of Directors of Voluntary Interindustry Commerce Standards (VICS), as Co-chair of VICS Item Level RFID Initiative (VILRI), and as a member of the Advisory Board for Sheex. She has spoken at numerous professional and industry conferences, including the National Retail Federation (NRF), U-Connect, and The Wharton Women Business Conference at The University of Pennsylvania. An active member of Fortune’s Most Powerful Women in Business, DiPietrantonio also volunteers for several charitable and non-profit programs.

An alumna of The College of New Rochelle, DiPietrantonio graduated with a BFA from the School of Arts & Sciences.

Diana Stano, OSU, the 16th President of Ursuline College, taught as a Professor of Education and served in various leadership positions before her appointment as President in 1996. Previously, she served as Dean of Graduate Studies and Director of Institutional Research, as founder and Director of the Graduate Program in Non-public Administration, the college’s first master’s degree program, and as Chair of the Education Department.

As a professional consultant, Sr. Diana has presented internationally in Taiwan, China, West Africa, and Canada. A panelist in numerous forums, she has also presented at national conferences including the International Leadership Association and the American Council on Education. She has led workshops for educators, religious, and other non-profit organizations, is an active member of many professional associations, and a peer evaluator for the Higher Learning Commission of the North Central Association.

Nationally, Sr. Diana served as Chair of the Commission of Women in Higher Education of the American Council on Education. She has served as Secretary/Treasurer and President of the Association of Catholic Leadership Programs and as a Program Co-chair of the North American Association of Ursuline Educators.

She is a member of the Board of Catholic Community Connects, and a member and Vice-chair of the Council of Presidents of the NCAA DII G-MAC Conference. She has served on college boards, including as a trustee of the Association of Independent Colleges and Universities of Ohio and on the Executive Committee and the Board of Trustees of the Ohio Foundation for Independent Colleges.

A graduate of Ursuline College, Sr. Diana earned her doctorate in science education from The Ohio State University.
New Campus Directors Named

New campus directors have been appointed to lead two School of New Resources campuses. Dr. Daphne Estwick has been appointed Director of the Rosa Parks Campus in Harlem, and Dr. Veronie Lawrence Wright is now the Director of the Brooklyn Campus.

Over the course of her career, Estwick has planned and managed a variety of degree programs for adult learners. Prior to joining the School of New Resources, she served as Academic Program Administrator at Rutgers University-School of Criminal Justice. At Columbia University, she served as Assistant Dean of Academic Affairs in the School of Continuing Education and as Director of the Liberal Studies M.A. Program in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences. As a librarian, she worked at the New York law firm of Wachtell, Lipton, Rosen, and Katz; the consulting firm Booz, Allen, and Hamilton; and The Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Estwick completed her doctorate in adult education and organizational learning at Teachers College, Columbia University and her book, Arms Out, Palms Open: Conflict, Reconciliation, and Gay Inclusion, is based on her dissertation research. She received an MA in Islamic culture, an MS in library science from Columbia University, and a BA in sociology from St. Lawrence University.

Lawrence Wright has more than a decade of experience in higher education at public and private colleges throughout New York City. Prior to joining the School of New Resources, she was a counseling faculty and project manager for Bronx Community College. In 2010, she earned a doctorate in education from Delaware State University, specializing in leadership, administration, and supervision. Her educational career began as an adjunct at the School of New Resources Co-op City Campus. She also served as an adjunct professor for the Graduate School.

Lawrence Wright earned a BS in accounting from Hunter College, a master's in public administration from John Jay College of Criminal Justice, and a master's in higher education administration from Baruch College.

School of New Resources Students Recognized for Academic Achievement at First Honors Convocation

“How far will you go?” the Rev. Dr. Floyd R. Blair SNR ’97 asked the School of New Resources students gathered for their inaugural Honors Convocation at The Wellness Center in November 2013.

“What are you willing to do to make sure that someday you're the person speaking up here, to another group of people, to inspire them to be better than they are today?” asked Blair, who has come a long way from a childhood in foster care, in poverty, growing up in the projects, and on the streets of Brooklyn.

He is now president and CEO of Lutheran Services of Georgia, a nonprofit that runs more than 20 programs to help people in need. Before that, the attorney and ordained minister served as a congressional aide, a senior advisor to President George W. Bush's faith-based initiatives, and in the administrations of the governors of Maryland and Connecticut.

It's a journey that began at The College of New Rochelle, which honored 380 SNR students for their academic achievements.

President Judith Huntington spoke of her pride in the day's honorees. “I am so impressed with your strong academic quality, commitment to education, and all that you are putting forth to earn your degree,” she said. “Many of you are the first in your families to go to college and are working and raising children, and yet you persevere because you recognize that education will transform your life and that of your family.”

The Honors Convocation was the first in the history of the School of New Resources—“an occasion that is long overdue,” Huntington said. “Let me be the first to congratulate you as honor students at The College of New Rochelle School of New Resources!”

Huntington said she looks forward to reading of their achievements, and perhaps welcoming them back to share their stories, like Blair.

“It started right here,” said Blair, who first came to the Brooklyn Campus on the recommendation of his sister-in-law. “I didn’t know at the time that my life was so drastically changed by the impact of that conversation with Elza Dinwiddie-Boyd,” who signed him up for classes.

Blair said he’s met many people from Harvard, Columbia, and the like who think he attended an Ivy League school as well. “I’d think, yeah, I did—I went to the prestigious College of New Rochelle!”

“The academic preparation that I received at The College of New Rochelle afforded me the opportunity to go a lot of places,” Blair said, “to hold my own with some of the
The School of New Resources will offer a new Addiction Counseling Certificate Program that includes preparation; training for students to work as counselors with people who have alcohol, drug abuse, nicotine dependence, and compulsive gambling addictions; as well as preparation for the certifying exams for CASAC/CASAC-T (Credentialed Alcohol and Substance Abuse Counseling). The Program to be offered at the Main Campus in New Rochelle as well as the city campuses in Brooklyn, Co-op City, South Bronx, and Harlem will begin in the upcoming spring 2014 semester. It includes an Addiction Counseling Sequence and an Addiction Studies Sequence, depending on whether the student is seeking initial certification or professional development training. In either sequence, students receive both academic credit and specialized training, which counts as educational requirements toward the CASAC.

The Addiction Counseling Sequence, which includes preparation for CASAC certification, is relevant for students in a variety of fields including mental health programs, school prevention programs, correctional services, and private practice. The Addiction Studies Sequence, which includes preparation for CASAC-T certification, will offer professional development training and education relevant to social workers, psychologists, mental health practitioners, health care providers, and prevention specialists.
In a talk that blended practical advice, humor, and big-picture issues, a School of Nursing alumna shared her experiences in establishing a sustainable health care system in a Haiti village at the School of Nursing’s Global Health Conference.

The event opened with a moment of silence for the victims of Typhoon Haiyan, driving home the importance of disaster preparedness, and the need for a plan to provide help in the wake of such tragedies.

Last February, Darcel M. Reyes SN’96 traveled to Fonfrede, in Les Cayes, with fellow volunteer nurses from the City University of New York; public health researchers from Smith College; CapraCare, a non-governmental agency; and several other volunteers. Reyes graduated summa cum laude from the School of Nursing’s RN-BSN program and has a master of science in nursing, is a board-certified adult nurse practitioner, and a specialist in the care of people with HIV.

“I am in awe of your compassion for others, which is part of the mission of our College,” said Dr. Jane Slagle, director of the RN-BSN program. “It makes you truly a CNR nurse.”

Reyes opened her keynote address, “Global Is the New Local,” with a brief history of global health. In the first half of the 20th century, what was then called international health had an “us vs. them” mentality. This mostly involved rich countries helping poorer ones to serve colonial interests.

With the advent of the “peace and love” ethos of the 1960s and 1970s, along with the emergence of worldwide epidemics of HIV, flu strains, and the like, “we began to realize it is not just happening to them over there,” Reyes said. “We weren’t exempt from it.”

In the 21st century, global health now encompasses international health policies, medical tourism, medical missions, and world responses to natural disasters.

For Reyes’ team, the focus in Haiti was to create something long-term. “How can you make the people there own it?” she said. The challenges were many—not least of which was that the 2010 earthquake destroyed the country’s only nursing school and killed most of its second-year nursing class.

They started with the youngest patients, registering every child so they could start a medical record and could receive continuous care. The team also acquired commitments from local professionals—two doctors and two nurses now visit the village twice a month.

The mission also held separate sessions for teens, and Reyes said the younger volunteers were really useful in communicating with this population.

Malnutrition was a major issue for children. “They were hungry and dehydrated. Water was very precious.”

Next, they engaged the adult population, whose major health problems were heart disease and diabetes, along with some cases of tuberculosis. Often this meant interviewing entire families.

Reyes offered advice to nurses who might take part in medical missions in other, perhaps less-developed countries. “It’s not America,” she said. “I love indoor plumbing,” but volunteers might have to use outhouses, go without air-conditioning, or eat unfamiliar food.

A coffee lover, Reyes made sure to bring instant coffee on her mission. She brought fruit and candy to hand out to whoever wanted them, but “nobody touched my coffee,” she said emphatically. “It’s important to have fun and relieve stress.”

Reyes said her experience in Haiti forced her to recognize that she had leadership skills from her training as a nurse. She exhorted the crowd of students in Romita: “If someone tells you they believe in you, believe them and lead. Every single one of you is learning to be a leader, and don’t you forget that.”

Scores Gather for Imagination, Inquiry, & Innovation Institute

CNR welcomed dozens of educators, thinkers, and practitioners from a variety of fields last spring for its groundbreaking Imagination, Inquiry, & Innovation Institute.

The daylong series of workshops and presentations featured a range of disciplines, from creating art in hospice settings, to the use of physical movement to generate ideas, to taking advantage of “the cloud” and other online tools to increase student engagement.

“We thought it would be wonderful to have a thinking institute,” said Dr. Ruth Zealand, Associate Professor of Education and one of the organizers of the conference. “We wanted the variety of expertise and interest to really bloom here.”

Anna Deavere Smith, a playwright and educator perhaps best known for her TV roles on Nurse Jackie and The West Wing, hammered home the idea of using innovation to help others in her keynote address.

She tells the story of getting lost while hiking a mountain in Colorado. Four hours in, she hears her first human sound—it’s a man huffing and puffing up the mountain behind her. She asks him for help. He says, “I’m on a timer, I can’t talk,” and shoots right past her.

“I tell that story because I worry that’s where our country is going,” she said. The gap between the haves and the have-nots, she says, is not just about money. “There’s a huge division that has to do with what we would call excellence, aptitude, or abilities that come from certain experiences,” she said. “Is this what it means to pursue excellence?”

Next, Deavere Smith read from Edward P. Jones’ Pulitzer Prize-winning novel The Known World, about a freed black man in antebellum Virginia who would go on to own slaves. It’s clear she is an actor and a master storyteller, bringing the characters to life—Henry Townsend, his bewildered mother and father, the former slave master who becomes his mentor, and more. “The moral of the story is that Henry, a black man, likes things. He wants things, and that want outweighs anything he was taught by remarkable people—he’s parents.

“That kind of individual pursuit of things is something that we have to do some serious weighing about, if we’re really trying to find a moral imagination or empathy,” Deavere Smith said.

The day ended with a reception at the Castle Gallery recognizing Maxine Greene and her contributions to aesthetic education and social change. – Mark Ramirez

Education Scholar Decries Standardized Testing

Education scholar Dr. Yong Zhao defended the philosophy behind the U.S. education system and decried the trend toward authoritarianism as evidenced by the Common Core initiative, in a presentation at October 2013, at CNR.

“We need to be more American,” Zhao said. That means valuing students as individuals, not standard-bearers—helping them be their best, not the best by someone else’s standards.

The second annual Tom Sobol Lecture was presented by the College and Public Schools for Tomorrow.

“We have to go back to the American tradition to seek solutions—democracy and individuals. People—not dictators or big government.”

Zhao said that Western societies have begun to admire the authoritarian school systems of Asian nations—China, in particular. “We have always admired the Chinese for their emphasis on education for over 2,000 years,” said Zhao, who grew up in a small village in China.

The country practically invented standardized testing in 675 AD, with an exam that guaranteed anyone who passed prosperity and social status. This was a real promise, but it also ensured a compliant citizenry, Zhao said.

This means there’s little innovation, and new ideas arise only by accident. China, Zhao said, doesn’t have 2,000 years of history—just 200 years repeated ten times, with each new dynasty mostly a repeat of the previous one.

Test scores, Zhao said, are not good measures of teachers. Growing up in Sichuan Province, he had one teacher his first two years of school, and another from grades 3 to 5. “They didn’t know much,” Zhao said, but they created space for him to grow. He learned to read and enjoyed it, a springboard toward further studies.

He received his BA in English language education from Sichuan Institute of Foreign Languages in Chongqing, China, in 1986. After teaching English in China for six years, he came to Linfield College as a visiting scholar in 1992. He then began his graduate studies at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign in 1993. He received his master’s in education in 1994 and PhD in 1996. He joined the faculty at MSU in 1996 after working as the Language Center Coordinator at Willamette University and as a language specialist at Hamilton College.

Zhao is a professor in the Department of Educational Measurement, Policy, and Leadership in the College of Education at the University of Oregon, where he also serves as the Presidential Chair and Director of the Institute for Global and Online Education.

Zhao said he is worried about the education of his two children. But he also expressed confidence in the United States, so long as it looks to create the future and not measure itself against countries that are trying to catch up.

“The only way America will lose to anybody is to think that we will lose to somebody,” Zhao said. “A successful person does not try to beat other people—you try to be the best for yourself.” – Mark Ramirez
Students and Loved Ones Enjoy Full Slate of Events at Family Weekend

The CNR Fair, Honors Convocation, Homecoming, and a trip to Broadway for a show were just a few of the highlights as families came to The College of New Rochelle for Family Weekend in October 2013.

Pilar Ramirez SAS’72 was the keynote speaker Saturday at the Honors Convocation for students in the School of Arts & Sciences and the School of Nursing, and she urged students to uphold the Ursuline tradition of service.

“That’s my advice to all of you,” said the native of Bolivia, who with four other women founded a microfinance bank and pioneered microfinance not just in her country, but throughout Latin America. “Find something for you to do in your lives that helps change other, more unfortunate people’s lives.”

The good that you do “will come back twice, three times,” she said.

Ramirez, who graduated from CNR with a degree in psychology, says she learned about service from Sr. Dorothy Ann Kelly, then the SAS Dean, and later President of the College.

Her four years at CNR, living far away from home, were not always easy, Ramirez said. “I would come to the chapel to pray, to cry...and many times I saw our dean changing the flowers, fixing the altar, sweeping the stairs.

“It was an incredible example of service,” said Ramirez, who went on to earn a master’s degree in psychology from the New School and a master’s in public administration from the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard University.

After recognizing students’ academic achievements, the community enjoyed lunch in the Maura Ballroom, which also featured musical performances, and the CNR Fair on Maura Lawn. The Fair included a DJ, face painting, a rock climbing wall, and numerous other activities. Students and guests then celebrated homecoming with a volleyball match at The Wellness Center. The Blue Angels triumphed, 3-0, over Cooper Union.

CNR History Professor Wins Emmy as Contributor to NBC’s Olympic Coverage

Dr. Amy Bass, Professor of History and director of the Honors Program, won an Emmy Award as a member of the NBC team that broadcast the 2012 London Olympics.

Bass’ work in London as supervisor of the network’s Olympic Research Room provided background information and monitored breaking stories for the broadcast of the Games.

London marked the eighth Olympics that Bass has worked for NBC. An internationally recognized expert on the interdisciplinary study of sports, Bass’s first book, Not the Triumph but the Struggle: The 1968 Olympic Games and the Making of the Black Athlete, is considered a standard bearer for those interested in writing about sports from a cultural perspective.

At CNR, Bass teaches the course Race, Sport, and Society, which brings many of her Olympic experiences into the classroom. Just this semester, she advised an Honors colloquium project on the role of sports in the Cold War, with a particular focus on the U.S. hockey team’s victory over the Soviet Union in Lake Placid in 1980, the so-called “Miracle on Ice.”
Miss New York 2011 Touts the Power of Choice in Conquering Bullying

Oppressors, their victims, and bystanders alike all have the power to make a difference in the struggle against bullying, said activist Kaitlin Monte, Miss New York 2011, who shared her insights and experiences with a packed Romita Auditorium at the College in October 2013.

Monte chose to take up the issue of bullying after winning her crown because, she said, “When you become Miss New York, you don't get to just sit in your apartment and say, 'oh, I’m so beautiful.'” She wanted to “shatter the stereotype of dumb beauty queens.”

More importantly, Monte has experience with bullying. Her experiences in school played a part in her skipping her junior and senior years of high school and enrolling at the University of Tampa at the age of 16.

Her brother, with a condition similar to autism, retreated from social interaction because of the way his classmates treated him. A sister, who is dyslexic, was harassed in college by a professor who accused her of cheating on tests and did not allow her to take part in class discussions.

“It’s not just kids pushing on playgrounds,” said Monte, who has also been stalked via text message by an ex-boyfriend.

A bit paradoxically, Monte said, “There’s no such thing as a bully.” Bullying is more about the behavior of people who make bad choices in an effort to exert control on their lives, she said. Leadership, she said, is the opposite—taking control by making positive choices.

Monte shared what she called the “doughnut story”—how one day, feeling sad and angry on her way in to work, she stopped and bought two dozen treats for her colleagues. Instead of being the sarcastic and mean person she would’ve normally been, “I was the secret doughnut fairy.” It started a tradition that probably continues to this day, Monte said. “That feels powerful to me—leadership can be very small.”

The power of choice applies to victims as well. “When someone has put you in a box, you have an opportunity to not go down to their standard,” Monte said. In many cases, as soon as victims make it difficult for their tormentors, they move on.

Bystanders also play an important role, and even the smallest gesture can make a big difference—offering homework help, lending some clothes, or treating someone to a snack. “Suicides happen when it feels like every option in the community is closed to you,” said Monte. “You may be that last door they remember.”

Monte’s presentation was followed by a Q&A session that also included Susan Conte, PhD, CSW, Associate Professor of Guidance and Counseling in the Graduate School; Dorothy Larkin, PhD, RN, Associate Professor in the School of Nursing; and Elizabeth Spadaccini, MS, LMSW, Assistant Dean for Support Services.

The questions ranged from big-picture concerns, such as cyberbullying in schools, to audience members’ specific questions about bullied children and siblings.

Monte is an official partner of the ADL No Place for Hate campaign and the United Federation of Teachers’ “Be BRAVE” initiative, and worked with numerous leading programs including WiredSafety.org, STOPCyberbullying.org, The Bully Project, Teenangels, The Ophelia Project, All About Bullies Big and Small, Karen Klein Foundation, End to Cyberbullying Organization, Girl Scouts of America, and more.

CNR Offers Anti-Bullying Training

The College of New Rochelle is the only southern Westchester college to offer a certified anti-bullying program, which fulfills the New York State Department of Education training requirement for new education professionals. Mandated by the Dignity for All Students Act (DASA), the training program, “Prevention and Intervention of Harassment, Bullying, Cyber-bullying and Discrimination in Schools,” fulfills the anti-bullying training requirement for anyone applying for New York State teaching, administrative, support, and professional positions, or school service certificates or licenses on or after December 31, 2013.

GRADUATES GATHER AT CNR FOR 75TH ANNUAL ALUMNAE/I COLLEGE

Graduates of the School of Arts & Sciences and School of Nursing gathered for a full slate of activities at The College of New Rochelle during the 75th annual Alumnae/i College. After breakfast, the members of class years ending in 3s and 8s were welcomed by CNR President Judith Huntington and Alumnae/i Association President Rosa Puleo Napoleone SAS’75. The keynote was delivered by Cynthia Hackney DiPietrantonio SAS’83, chief operating officer of The Jones Group. Her speech was followed by a ceremony presenting the Women of Achievement, Ursula Laurus, and Angela Merici awards. Attendees gathered for a Festa Italiana-themed dinner at the Sweeny Student Center, featuring a cocktail reception and dancing, while the Class of 1963 was treated to a Golden Anniversary Tribute Dinner at the Castle. On Sunday, June 8, alumnae/i enjoyed breakfast with the Ursulines.
CNR Can Help Make Your Retirement More Comfortable

Given the constant changes in tax laws, a volatile stock market, and low interest rates, CNR wants you to know that there is a safe, tax-advantaged, and I.R.S.-approved way to supplement your retirement income—and help provide the resources that enable The College of New Rochelle to maintain its high academic standards.

A charitable gift annuity with The College of New Rochelle can pay you a dependable lifetime income that is largely tax-free and more generous than the returns from most conventional investments (see rates below).

Frank Rizza
An exceptional professional, an amazing professor, a wonderful soul were just a few of the ways his students described Frank Rizza, Associate Professor of Career Development in the Graduate School, upon learning of his passing on October 17, 2013, after a long battle with cancer. Said Charmaine Gittens Medford, “Dr. Rizza was one of a kind. He always provided time to listen or talk and guide students. We were always excited to be in his class, because we knew that we would learn so much.”

Frank Rizza joined the Graduate School faculty in 2003 as an Assistant Professor in the Career Development Program and was promoted to Associate Professor in 2009. He was instrumental in the development of the Mental Health Counseling Program launched in 2007, and he became the advisor to that program. Frank was very involved in professional organizations and recently spent one year as the President of the New York Mental Health Counselors Association.

Said CNR President Judith Huntington, “Frank was beloved by all his students who flocked to his courses for his excellent teaching as well as his good humor and genuine concern for them. As a colleague, Frank was well-liked by all his peers, always had a smile, a warm greeting, or a good joke to tell you. Frank loved CNR. Frank and his wife Margie attended many CNR functions together, including our annual Christmas party and the Epiphany Mass. He loved his faith and was a regular participant in the College's service days, serving on the mission committee. Frank was a generous, kind individual, who embraced life and will be missed by all who knew him.”

Yvonne Heyes Billera
A member of the first graduating class of the School of New Resources in 1973, Yvonne Heyes Billera passed away on November 30, 2013. After graduating, she joined the staff of the School of New Resources, serving in many capacities, including as Administrative Assistant to the Dean, Assistant to the Director of the SNR New Rochelle Campus, Director of Admissions for SNR, and Assistant Dean, SNR. Later she joined the College's advancement area, serving as Assistant Vice President for College Relations, before being promoted to Vice President for College Advancement from 1983 to 1990. She also was an adjunct instructor of English at SNR for several years and conducted Life Experience Portfolio Workshops and taught writing and communication skills at the Co-op City Campus.

Lorette Brophy, OSU
Sr. Lorette Brophy (Patricia Mary ’43) served as Registrar at CNR from 1969-74, a time of much transition. For the past 29 years, Sr. Lorette served in the province of South Africa, where she recently passed away at the age of 92.
Jane Clary, OSU
The last of the five Clary sisters to graduate from CNR, Sr. Jane Clary died on July 14, 2013 at the age of 101. Jane, who received her BA from CNR in 1933, joined the Ursulines after graduation and taught in elementary and high school for several years before joining the CNR faculty in 1941.

For the next three decades, Sr. Jane, known to her students as Mother Marie Madeleine, taught freshman English and journalism, and was a beloved class advisor, “corridor mother,” faculty advisor to several student publications, and moderator of several College organizations. In the 1960s, she oversaw the CNR film series and led a group of CNR students and alumnae to Ireland in 1969 to view the growing Irish film industry. In 1968, she had film study introduced into the College curriculum. Sr. Jane retired in 1976.

Ann Fitzpatrick, CSJ
Dr. Ann Fitzpatrick, CSJ, who passed away on February 10, 2013, came to CNR in 1988 as Assistant Dean in the Graduate School, bringing extensive experience in both teaching and administration. In 1990, she was promoted to Associate Dean, when she oversaw for many years the co-sponsored programs. She retired in 2001.

Janice Powell
Janice Powell, who passed away on July 20, 2013, at the age of 92, was the Director of Student Advisement for the School of New Resources and later Instructional Staff at the New York Theological Seminary Campus until 1993. According to her daughter, Jo Ann, “My mother really loved the College, her colleagues, and especially the students that she mentored. I was my mother’s companion for the majority of the graduations on campus, and I could see the attention, pride, and love between her and her students. To be present for each graduation was especially sweet.”

Johnna Paladino Roca
After her graduation from CNR in 1988, Johnna Paladino Roca stayed on as Assistant Director of Media & Photographic Services for nine years before leaving the College in 1997 to raise her family. After a long courageous battle with cancer, Johnna passed away on November 8, 2013. While working at CNR, she went on to earn master of fine arts and master of art education degrees from CNR. During her time at the College she also served as the College photographer, lending her photography talents at many events over the years. She also taught art and photography as an adjunct at CNR, and as part of her graduate art education program taught art at Mamaroneck High School.

DEAR GRADUATES AND FRIENDS,

Thank you for the support that is so evident in this Annual Report. On behalf of the Board of Trustees, I express my gratitude to you for joining thousands of donors who gave $4.1 million to The College of New Rochelle. Graduates of all four schools, faculty, staff and friends responded to the Challenge offered by an anonymous CNR graduate and benefactor. The “Million Dollar Challenge” to match all new and increased gifts to the College up to $1 million was met and exceeded by $153,000. Corporations and foundations as well as some extraordinary planned gifts also helped to provide significant revenue for CNR in 2013.

I extend special appreciation to all of you who participated in the Trustee Gala last year. It was a special celebration of Sr. Dorothy Ann Kelly's life and her distinguished service to students, faculty, and alumni who knew her as classmate, teacher, mentor, colleague, friend and College president. She was a constant champion of education, women's rights, her Ursuline ministry and heritage and, of course, The College of New Rochelle. We honored five distinguished alumnae and presented them with the Sr. Dorothy Ann Kelly Women of Leadership Award for exemplifying her values. More than 400 guests attended and contributed over $300,000.

Hurricane Sandy did impact our overall fund-raising programs, but we were able to increase the number of President's Circle donors in fiscal year 2013. Overall donor participation, however, did decrease from a year ago and we are hopeful that those donors will return when circumstances permit.

It is gratifying to see the large number of Fidelis Society members whose consistency of support is noted on the following pages. This stability of support enables the College to distribute financial aid to many deserving students each and every year.

The College has for more than a century provided excellence in education that challenges critical thinking, provides career preparation, instills values, and fosters a commitment to lifelong learning. Instrumental to this is your ongoing partnership with us. We are grateful for all that you do as volunteers, event planners and hosts, board and committee members, donors and good friends. You strengthen us in many ways, and you are helping to secure a vibrant future for CNR.

Gratefully,

Elizabeth Bell LeVaca

PARTNERS FOR EXCELLENCE
GIFT SOCIETIES

Partners for Excellence is a College-wide effort to engage students, faculty, staff, graduates, and friends in a meaningful and mutually beneficial relationship to provide for the current and future health of the College. Financial support is one critical cornerstone of a strong and vibrant learning community.

We thank all our partners for excellence who so generously and consistently support the College, its mission, and most importantly its students.

Donor recognition societies were created to express our deep appreciation to our most generous donors and our most loyal donors via special listings and membership in the St. Angela Society, Mother Irene Gill Society, and the Fidelis Society.

ST. ANGELA SOCIETY
($1 MILLION+ LIFETIME GIVING)
St. Angela Merici founded the Ursuline Order. CNR was originally named The College of St. Angela in 1906 by its Ursuline foundresses. Over the past century, St. Angela’s history and legacy have been kept alive through the vitality of the College’s mission, and on campus in the naming of Angela Residence Hall, the celebration of the Feast of St. Angela annually in January, and the bronze statue of St. Angela Merici on the New Rochelle campus.

With profound gratitude, we recognize these donors whose cumulative lifetime giving to all funds has provided foundational and transformational support for the growth and development of The College of New Rochelle.

MOTHER IRENE GILL SOCIETY
($500,000 – $999,999 Lifetime Giving)
Mother Irene Gill (1860-1935), recognized for her leadership skills and commitment to the education of women, was a religious leader, academic administrator, and founder of The College of Saint Angela (changed in 1910 to The College of New Rochelle). Under her leadership, the College became the fifth Catholic women’s college in the country and the first in New York State.

The College is extraordinarily grateful to the following donors whose cumulative lifetime giving to all funds has generously supported the College for so many years, providing critical funding for CNR’s growth and expansion.

The President’s Circle
Annual Fund Leadership Gift Society

Membership in The President’s Circle—CNR’s most prestigious Annual Fund donor recognition society—is granted to donors whose gifts to the Annual Fund total $1,500 or more each year (July 1 to June 30). Matching gifts are included in the donor’s gift total.

Leadership gifts are critical to the financial health of the College and can be used where the need is greatest or where the donor requests their contribution to be used. These contributions provide for an academically rich educational experience.

In 2013, 241 members of The President’s Circle gave more than $2,037,000 to the Annual Fund. With great appreciation, we thank these graduates and friends and welcome them into one of the following President’s Circle donor recognition societies.

Thank You!
The College of New Rochelle thanks its many volunteers who serve in various capacities. The College continues to thrive because of your dedicated service.
ANNUAL FUND GIFT SOCIETIES

Gifts to the Annual Fund are used to meet the College’s greatest current needs—items not covered by tuition, but necessary to a CNR education. Giving to the Annual Fund is one direct way to be a ‘partner for excellence’ and help the College and its students.

Your partnership at any level of giving will make a difference, ensure CNR’s future, maintain its tradition of excellence in education and create opportunities. We are particularly grateful to the following members of our Annual Fund donor recognition societies.

ALUMNAE/I ASSOCIATION MISSION STATEMENT

Dedicated, hardworking and visionary people have brought The College of New Rochelle through a century of excellence in education. For the College to continue as a vibrant, thriving institution, it is our alumnae/i who will allow us to realize our hopes and aspirations for the future through their presence, wisdom and partnership. Our alumnae/i are living examples of the mission of CNR and it is your investment in the College that will ensure all students will have access to wisdom for life.

THANK YOU!
The College of New Rochelle thanks its many graduates and friends who have remembered the College in their estate plans. If you have done so and would like to be enrolled in our Heritage Society, please call Claire Manto, Director of Donor Relations, at (800) 474-4232.
Other Gifts

In addition to gifts to the Annual Fund, the generosity of our alumnae/i, and friends is expressed through other gifts to the College: restricted gifts for special purposes or programs; gifts in-kind, endowed gifts, estate gifts and capital gifts. We also receive funding from state and federal government programs along with corporations and foundations in support of CNR initiatives and ongoing programs. Corporate matching gifts provide an additional significant source of revenue. We are ever grateful to our donors who take advantage of them to benefit the College.

WELLNESS CENTER CONTEMPLATION GARDEN PAVERS

Cast your memories in stone and support the College so generations of new students can build their own memories here. Pavers are a wonderful way to show your support for The College of New Rochelle and create a lasting remembrance or recognition of a graduate, current student, faculty/staff member, loved one, or friend. The paver will be placed in the walkway adjacent to the Contemplation Garden at The Wellness Center.

We thank the following donors for their contributions to this special walkway.

Gifts of cash are always welcome, but there are other excellent ways to make a donation to the College. One of the easiest and most tax-efficient methods is to use appreciated stock.

Giving stocks, bonds, and mutual fund shares that have increased in value (and that you have owned for more than one year) provides greater tax benefits than donating cash, so your gift dollars go further and have more impact.

You are allowed to take a tax deduction for the full market value of the securities —up to 30% of your adjusted gross income—and avoid paying capital gains tax on the appreciation.

The more appreciation the securities have, the greater your tax savings will be. With the stock market reaching record highs in recent months, now may be the time to make a gift that benefits both you and CNR!

For information, contact Claire Manto, Director of Donor Relations, at (914) 654-5282 or cmanto@cnr.edu.
